CROWDS AND ENTHUSIASM AT THE CALL OF AN OUTSIDE ORGANIZATION-SPEECHES BY SENATOR EVARTS, COLONEL CRUGER, COLONEL SHEPARD, DR. DERRICK AND OTHERS.

Politics got a little hot in Wall Street yesterday afternoon, when the Democrats discovered that a rousing Republican mass-meeting was going on right under their noses at the steps of the Sub-Treasury Building. It hadn't been advertised much beforehand, and it was projected by an organization entirely outside of Wall Street, but it got a big audience and presented a splendid list of speakers. The Democratic brokers had heard nothing of the proposed meeting from their Republican friends, and the Stock Exchange Club had no connection with it. No Secretary of the Treasury was imported from Washington to explain how the surplus, which alone excused the Presi- York. dent's free-trade agitation, had dwindled from an overgrown Newfoundland dog to a little wee doggie," "doggie," and the early hour fixed for the meeting precluded any sort of club parading. But the size of the actual meeting reached that of the widely advertised Democratic "Wall Street gathering." which marked the beginning of a change in the famous Cleveland luck respecting, among other things, the weather, if the meagre display of their clubs is stricken out.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the William H. Seward Republican Club, a National organization that is working hard for the protection ticket, in order to do honor to its great namesake. A portrait of the dead statesman filled the space between the two pillars of the Sub-Treasury porch on the extreme left, a companion to a portrait of Lincoln on the extreme right. Between them were pictures of Grant, Harrison, Morton and Warner Miller. American flags thickly covered the corner bastion where the speakers' stand was erected, and flags were stretched in front of the lower steps. The National banner was lashed to the statuc of George Washington so that it looked as if grasped George Washington so that it looked as II grasped in his hands. Part of the steps was given over to a delegation of the Charles Sumner Campaign Club, of Brooklyn, an old organization of colored voters, including a drum and fife corps. The members were caps and capes made out of American flags, and just before the speaking began a lady, who is one of the members of the W. H. Seward Club, presented them with thirty-eight flags for the service of the organization.

A BAND WAS NOT NECESSARY.

There was no band to attract the big crowd, but the Glee Club of the Wholesale Dry.Goods Republican organization made the air vocal with sheir campaign songs, while the people were waiting for the meeting to be opened. They hushed the "free-trade baby" to sleep, they bade "Grover, good-bye," they rallied around Protection, put "Grover in the cold, cold ground," and performed the other musico-political acts which have always drawn yells of delight from Proceedings of the cold ground."

which have always drawn yells of delight from Republican audiences.

Speeches were made by John F. Baker, of the Seward Club, who called the meeting to order: Senator Evarts Colonel S. V. R. Cruger, the Rev. Dr. MacArthur, W. S. Guthrie, Colonel Elliott F. Shepard and the Rev. Dr. Derrick. Mr. Evarts address aroused the utmost enthusiasm, and his greeting from the crowd was of the warmest kind. His speech was largely devoted to demolishing one of the latest Democratic lies about the Republican Senate and the Extradition Treaty with Great Britain. Earnest pleas were made by the speakers in behalf of the local and State tickets, and there was as hearty a response to State tickets, and there was as hearty a response their commendations and appeals. Dr. Derrick's dignity soon silenced some ribald Democratic shouters, and before he had finished he had brought the audience to a state of lively enthusiasin.

lican leader who was remembered with Lincoln and Grant and the other great men, to whom the present candidate of the party, General Harrison, was not unworthy to be a successor. (Cheers.) Continuing, he said substantially: The even tenor of General Harrison's maintenance of the Constitution and the laws and the principles of this Republican party in its control of affairs will last to the end of the four years unbroken, undisturbed by any domestic young man," but just now we say: "Go West, Englishnated General Harrison. We know why the soldiers are to vote for him. (Cheers.) We know why the statesmen to vote for him. We know why the merchants and bankers and manufacturers and wage-earners all over this untry are to vote for Harrison. (Cheers.)

THAT LAUGHABLE SACKVILLE INCIDENT. We have an incident now which all the country is laughing at, in the final show-up of the interesting intrigue be-tween the President and the Secretary of State on the himself from the two Houses of Congress that, without any division of party, by their resolutions held and advised the President that we needed no new treaty with Great ain at all; that we were satisfied that we could take care of our citizens, the fishermen, and their interests and naintain our share of the fishery grounds without being dependent upon any new treaty arrangement. But in spite of this unanimity the President and the Secretary of State undertook to make a treaty that was to be wiser and better. The Senate rejected it, and the houses passed a But the President thought be could make semicient. But the President thought be could make some advantage of it, though he had not used the powers given him, by using it for intrigue. This was, as you all see, by a letter from the Minister of Great Britain, advising that all this notion of vigor and earnestness and courage on the part of the President and the Secretary of State was an electioneering necessity and nothing else. Well, we all thought so. The two houses of Congress thought so, and now it is disclosed, and what is the remedy or the reaction? The Minister of England having carried on this relation for the good of his country and to the injury of ours, has at last, by a letter under his own hand and affirmed again by him, let the cat out of the bag. (Laughter.) Well, now, has the President caught the cat and put it back? No. The cat is abroad still, all over this country, with those diplomatic secrets and those understandings and all that our Government can do is to send off the man that

let the cat out of the bag. (Cheers.)

A DEMOCRATIC FALSEHOOD ABOUT THE EX-TRADITION TREATY.

Now, this merning I see in "The Herald" a statement, over the names of a good many very respectable Democrats, on the subject of the Extradition Treaty, charging that Republicans have been indifferent to the charging that Republicans have been indifferent to the rights of our Irish and other citizens in the protection of political refugees from Europe. The substance of the charge is that Secretary Bayard made a treaty with Great Britain on the subject of extradition, and within it there was an ampie protection against political grounds and political persons being embraced in it, but that the Republican party insisted on so modifying it, that, at the request of the Minister from Engiand, Mr. West, we have disparaged this protection and have exposed to injury and danger some portion of our follow-citizens. injury and danger some portion of our fellow-citizens. Now there might as well here once for all be an end put to these charges. There is not one particle of foun-dation whatever for the whole story. The treaty was made by our Minister in England, Mr. Pheips, with Lerd Rosebery, then in charge of foreign affairs, and the treaty, as there made, was sent to the Senate. Minister west had nothing to do with it at all. Minister West had nothing to do with it at all. Minister West had nothing to do with persuading Mr. Bayard or Mr. Bayard with opposing him. The treaty as it was sent in was found so loose and so incomplete that "a Senate, in its duty to this country and to all the direns, Irish and Americans and Germans, could not tolerate it. It will be a long while before a Minister of England or any other country will approach the Committee of Foreign Relations of the Senate or the Senate itself in regard to any modification of our treaties. (Loud cheers.) But it is just to say that Mr. West, however he might calculate upon his wisdom or his success in dealing with the Ex-ecutive Government, never had an idea that he could suced with the Republican members of the Senate of the United States. (Cheers.)

THE KIND OF EXTRADITION WANTED. There was a good reason why we should make a very od treaty with Great Britain on the subject of extradition. Some of our Wall Street men know that if we had a better extradition treaty we could get some of our old citizens back from Canada. (Laughter.) But the old citizens back from Canada. Hadden She wished interest of England was in another direction. She wished a larger and more liberal extension of the laws of crime, to that some of the current and dangerous forms of erime might be better controlled. We on our hand wished that all who wrecked relirods by obstructions and all authors all who wrecked relirods by obstructions and all authors. malicious injuries of that kind might be extradited. But the clause of the treaty was so loose that it was impos-sible for us to acquiesce in it, and every change—and you may read the text yourselves-every change that was pro-as well as other treaties, in the way of protagainst political extradition. I have at hand in my against political extradition. I have at hand in my office a treaty made in 1880 with the Netherlands, a treaty exe-cuted and negotiated by a Republican Administration, and under my care as Secretary of State, and I wish you to hear whether this clause that the Republican party and the Republican Secretary of State inserted in an extradition treaty protects political refugees. Article III in the Netherlands Treaty of May 22, 1880, reads thus:

The provisions of this convention shall not apply to any crime or offence of a political character, nor to acts connected with such crimes or offences; and no person sure funder the provision hereof shall in any case be tried or punished for a crime or offence of a political character, nor for any act connected therewith, committed previously to his extradition.

Now, all that we did in the British Extradition Treaty was not to restrict this absolute protection, but we made it impossible that under any looseness of construction such crimes that could be pretended to have relation to politics or political offences could come in. If a refugee, whether an Irishman or an Englishman, comes here under concur. first, that the crime charged shall be one under the laws passed by the people of the State of New-

A CHALLENGE TO THE DEMOCRATS.

Now, I do not know how those gentlemen who have signed their names to this manifesto can justify it. I challenge anybody who knows what took place in the of the United States. (Cheers.) I challenge any one to show that there was any attempt or any desire to ove the treaty that the President had sent in, excein the direction of securing definitely and absolutely protection against the extradition of the doers of political offences and the subjects of political persecutions (Cheers.) But, to go further, this was much more than a year ago. Has the Scaate ever passed the Extradition Treaty at all? It was found a hopeless task to make it acceptable to the interests of the United States, and it was put over till next
December, which is pretty much equivalent o putting it over so that it will never become a tre wish this thing to be understood. I have read you nature of the clauses that the Republican party gets into its extraditions; and it is fair that I should say that in this very respect of protection against any possibility of the extradition and punishment of political refugees there is not any difference of feeling between the Executive of the Government and the Senate of the United States. REPUBLICANS SHOULD KEEP THEIR MINDS EASY.

Don't trouble yourselves about the extradition treaty Don't trouble yourselves about the attiltude of Senators, Republican or Democratic, on that subject, and especially don't trouble yourselves about the Republican party. That has shown what its feelings are about protecting refuces by the clause I have read to you from the Netherlands treaty. You are all going to vote for President Harrison (loud Governor Maller (cheers) and for Lieutenant-Governor Cruger (cheers) and for Mayor Colonel Erhardt (loud cheers); so that hereafter when we have to deal with Federal elections and State candidates we need not wonder vates. (Cheers.) If we have Republican Marers you will have every Democratic vote that is cast counted. and you will have every Republican vote counted. (Cheers.) Now, we like that in elections, and Colonel Erhardt, a brave soldier, a brave citizen, a well-instructbeen entrusted to him-and they are many and importantdoubt as to whether he trusts of distrusts most the many. We have heard each of them express its of them there are one hundred Republican gains from judgment of the other. They are well-informed. They the Democratic ranks. But I can assure you that for the State, for the city, and for the country, every Republican will POINTS MADE BY THE OTHER SPEAKERS.

Senator Evarts then introduced "our next enant-Governor," Colonel Cruger, who received an enthusiastic welcome. His speech was short, and stated the situation thus, that there is victory ahead for the Republicans, but that the Democrats are resorting to iniquitous practices to prevent it. Said he:

I have good authority that methods which have be adopted by the Democrats in the city of Baltimore will be put into force here if the Democrats can do it. But we don't propose to have any stuffed ballot-boxes in the city of New-York. (Cheers.) We will take measures to Tuesday next. (Cheers.) The Rev. Dr. MacArthur followed Colonel Cru-

I am giad as a man sou a minister that I coule man, Warner Miller. (Cheers.) I never in my twenty-five years' residence in these United States heard braver words from a political candidate than I heard from the lips of Warner Miller. (Cheers.) W. G. Guthrie made an elequent speech, in which he showed how the Republicans had been from the first the champions of protection, and that it was protection which had built up the Nation and made it independent of Britain or any other country in the world. As to the issue in the State he said:

Ah, men, if women could vote next Tuesday, would there be any doubt about the success of Warner Miller Do you doubt that to-night in many a humble home wives, mothers and eisters, suffering from the rum evil, kneel in prayer and send to heaven a hope that the "

In prayer and send to heaven a hope that the 't Governor of New-York shall be Warner Miller! (C.cers.)

Colonel Elliott F. Shepard, in the course of some brief, pithy and witty remarks, said that Grover Cleveland was always acting on the suggestion or initiative of the Republicans, and alluded to Lord Sackville's "dismissal" as the latest instance of it. The election cry in 1840, he remarked, was "Van, Van, is a used-up man." That, indeed, Van Buren proved to be, and undoubtedly the election would show the prophetic truth of the new cry, "Grover's in the cold, cold greguid."

The Rey. Dr. Derrick was the last speaker.

Rev. Dr. Derrick was the last speaker. The Rev. Dr. Derrick was the last speaker. He delivered a fervid and impressive address. He pointed out how much better was the lot of the American workingman under protection than that of the European workingman could eat meatbut once a day. Here he could eat it three or four times, or as often as he wanted. Of the Republican prospects, Dr. Derrick said:

We are on the homestretch. We are going to the judges' stand, and New-York, the great Empire State, the centre around which minor States tevolve, the centre of commerce and the great fountain of wealth, is on November 6 going to send Harrison to the White House. (Loud cheers.)

A PHILADELPHIA INDEPENDENT'S DISGUST. Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (Special).-Hampton L. Carson, an independent voter and one of Philadelphia's best-known citizens and orators, in speaking of the present Administration to-day, said: " As to the President's Civil Service, I confess I am sick at heart and it is a mystery how Curtis and his followers well endure the rank offences of Mr. Cleveland. His appointments in Indiana, his removal of Postmaster Huidekoper, his intimacy with Gorman, his advocacy of Fellows, his unholy alliance with Hill, his lack of of Fellows, his unholy alliance with Hill, his lack of sympathy with Hewitt, his open breach of faith as to the second term, excite my condemnation. The last two years of Cieveland's Administration have showed a steady course of descent, and his high standards have been abandoned for the sake of gratifying an ambition which has grown from hour to hour. The revision of the tariff cannot be done by the open enemies of a system which has done so much in the establishment of our industrial independence."

Congressman Mills's efforts to convert the working-men of New-Jersey to the belief that free trade will be for their benefit have proved too much for him, and he has retired from the stump. He broke down in Morristown Tuesday night, and was so exhausted that he cancelled all his remaining engagements and went to Washington yesterday afternoon. From there he will go to his home in Texas. Senator McPherson and the Democratic State Committee have persuaded Mayor Cleveland of Jersey City to fill Congressman Mills's remaining engagements in New-Jersey.

MR. BLAINE TO START FOR CONNECTICUT. Mr. and Mrs. Blaine passed a quiet day yesterday, seeing only a few intimate triends. To-day Mr. Blaine starts on his Connecticut tour, General Adam E. King, Walker Blaine and several members of the Republican State Committee of Connecticut accompanying him. The party will leave this city at 9 a. m., halting at Norwich, where Mr. Blaine will speak in the afternoon. He may speak a few words at Hartford and will deliver an address the next day at Ansenia. The party is expected back here on Friday afternoon. Mr. Blaine's speeches d tended to a restriction of the crimes embraced and back here on Friday afternoon. "That was the question that the State Committee asked me. I will answer you as I stiswer them, from experience. Indiana Democrats know the immense advantage that it is to have a citizen of the State on the National ticket. In the mey two Presidential elections in many years when they have carried the State Indiana was represented on the ticket. When Harrison was nominated at Chicago they were dumbfounded, but they could not abandon the fight, so passed the word along the line that clubs must be organized and the party must be leld together ready for fight. Local committees were advised to spend money freely, and were give the assurance that they would not only be reimbursed, but would be given a great deal more besides This was the condition of the party when the National Committee's attention was directed to the situation.
The Indiana politicians went before it with the statement that Indiana could not possibly be carried against Harrison's popularity unless money should be sent into the State with great liberality. went it blindly, and they have been going it blindly ever since. They have never said that it was because they would gain votes among the farmers, because oldiers were coming over to them, because the ma jority of the first voters were on their side, or beindependent Germans were kindly toward their purty. From all of these classes of voters the Republicans are making large gains. not deny that there have beer a few Republicans, widely scattered, who voted for Blaine that are now supporting Cleveland, but I know that for every one vote for Harrison because they admire him and desire to see a worthy citizen of the State in the Presidential Morristown, N. J., Oct. 31 (Special).—An enthusiastic meeting was held in Lyceum Hall to-night, under the auspices of the Republican Club. Excellent speeches were made by Judge Breman, of Iowa, and A. C. Rankin, of Pennsylvania. The audience, led by the Dry Goods Glee Club of New-York, sang several cam-paign songs.

The Brooklyn Rink was by no means crowded last even-ing when Governor Hill addressed a meeting, supposed to be directed by laboring men, but in the control of which Democratic politicians were prominent. The Governor was received with loud appliance and was introduced by Thomas F Delaney. He made an address similar to the one he gave in the Academy of Music and attempted to one he gave in the actions as the Stille Executive had been in the interests of laboring men. The Governor also addressed a meeting under the auspices of the Cleveland, Thurman and Hill War Veterans in Everett Hall, Brooklyn, last evening. Only a few old soldiers belong to the last evening. REPUBLICAN THRONGS IN BROOKLYN. A SPIRITED MASS-MEETING IN THE ACADEMY

OF MUSIC. There were many features in connection with the big Republican mass-meeting in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, last evening, which tended to make it one of the most striking of the political gatherings that Indianapolis, Oct. 31.—The political situation in have been held during the campaign, but there were idiana has now settled into the unchangable state. Iwo especially remarkable. One was that the boxes were filled with women, many of whom wore sashes decorated with bunting. The other feature was that just exactly ten minutes had elapsed from the time the doors were opened until the big building was filled. An immense crowd surged and struggled around the State Committee, I told them that I did not care to hear the encouraging things that they might be ready Music and fireworks heightened the excitement, and to report. I had been assured over and over that each time a good point was made by one of the would carry Indiana. I wanted them to tell me speakers and applauded, it was received with an answering roar of enthusiasm by those outside who

As the speeches did not begin until 8 o'clock, the time the usual campaign cries kept the audience in a condition of uproarious merriment. During a moment of silence a wag shouted: "Soup, soup; Grover's got the croup," whereupon the audience shook with laughter. The Continental Glee Club sang some selections to fill in the interval, and the meeting, which was under the auspices of the Kings County Republito hear the speeches. Theodore B. Willis called the meeting to order and introduced Jesse Johnson as chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Johnson, in introducing the first speaker, referred to him as "that prince of crators, and, more than that; that stalwart, brave and steadfast Republican, Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll." Colonel Inger-soll, when the applause subsided, said: "The Republican party has a history-so has the Democratic party. (Immense laughter.) Read the history of both parties and then make up your minds which organization an intelligent, patriotic man ought to join. (Applause.) Had it not been for the Republican party the great Republic would not to-night be represented on the map of the world. (Applause.) If it had not been for that glorious party, the old Stars and Stripes would not enrich the air of heaven to-night. I am proud that I have belonged to a party that made it possible for men to stand in every North ern State and speak in favor of universal liberty. Wherever the Democratic party had power that was not allowed." Colonel Ingersoll in his closing remarks said he was positive that Harrison would be triumphantly elected.

POWDERLY NEUTRAL IN THE CAMPAIGN. COMPLAINING THAT HIS ANSWERS TO PRIVATE LETTERS HAVE BEEN MADE PUBLIC.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (Special).-In "The Journal of United Labor," to be issued to-morrow, General Master letter printed in "The New-York Herald," from Pittsburg, which declared that he was in favor of a pro-

On several occasions during the present campaign private letters written by the General Master Workman have been given to the public by parties to whom I have written. On no occasion have I seen the full text of any of my letters in print; only such pertions as would assist the party to which my correspondent belonged have ap peared. . I have written to our members through campaign, and it would be but a simple act of courtesy of my letters. The letter in question was written to "James Campbell," in answer to a question as to whether Pres dent Cleveland had offered Powderly an office, and as to the charge that Powderly would support Congressman Scott and other Democrats. Mr. Powderly says, in part, in this letter:

Cleveland has not offered me a position. He has not hinted at it. I have not discussed the matter of my re-ceiving a position for myself or any other man, with him ceiving a position for myself of any other and or anybody of the Democracy. I have not written a letter indorsing Scott or any other member of Congress, except these recommended by the legislative committee which I appointed to watch the interests of labor at Washington. The man who told you that I had written a letter indorsing Scott lied. I am not free to advocate either party and have not done it by word, act, art or intimation; and no matter what is said or done, I will

When the special train arrived with Mr. Depew, thousands congregated at the station and lustily cheered him. He was immediately driven to the home of Warner Miller. The mass-meeting was held in the Grand Opera House and was presided over by Henry Churchill, a partner and was presided over by Hency Churchit, a parton of Senator Miller. Isaac Daniski presided and introduced Professor R. H. Mohr, who illustrated his well-pointed arguments with the help of a crayon. Colonel Cruger was then introduced. He spoke strongly on protection and said: "There has been great change in New-York City during the last few years, and the Democratic majority will be brought one we has responded to his country's call in war and was now responds in peace to the call of the Republicans, Warner Miller. For four years I have seen Grover Cleveland almost daily, and sometimes nightly as well: and I never saw him when I believed his mind and his heart were free from care for the best interests of the entire American people. He has honored me with his confidence, and I have learned to honor him, as I know the secrets of his heart. Believe me, therefore, my friends and countrymen, when I tell you that this man has had duty as his watchword, truth for his password, and integrity for his countersign. PROHIBITIONISTS PARADE AND HELP HILL

The large hall of Cooper Union was crowded to overflowing last night with Prohibitionists. Women and boys predominated. The meeting followed a parade in which about 2,000 men and boys partici-There were clubs of this city, Brooklyn and towns in New-Jersey and on Long Island. The line of march was from Thirty-fourth-st. and Breadway to Fifth-ave., to Twenty-third-st., to Br ad-way to Fourteenth-st., to Fourth-ave., and to Cooper Union. At Union Square the paraders were reviewed by General Clinton B. Fisk. Samuel Dickie presided at the meeting, which was opened by singing Prohibition campaign songs. Michael J. Fanning, of Michigan, argued from a prohibitory point of view, and Sam Small said: "We represent the only really National question, the merits of which are to be determined at the polls next Tuesday." He denied that the Prohibitionists' efforts tend to help the Democrats, but gave Governor Hill a lift by em.
